THE PREMISE

The boutique wealth manager is systematically priced out of every tool that exists. Bloomberg Terminal: ~$32,000/seat/year (2026 verified). Bloomberg PORT adds $58K–$25K/seat on top. Bespoke quant builds: $500K–$2M and 12–24 months. Spreadsheets fill the gap.

2,000+ single family offices in Singapore (MAS, 2024). 500+ independent wealth managers. Every one managing client assets without the tools their clients would expect them to have. The gap is structural. It will not close itself.

THE RESPONSE — VEKTOR

- 10,000 portfolio configurations per strategy. Systematic construction, not guesswork. Audit-ready output. 99.94% availability target.
- Data-layer independent. Runs on IBKR market data as standard. Does not require Bloomberg feeds. Bloomberg Terminal users keep their Terminal — Vektor adds the construction layer.
- Three entry motions: add systematic construction for 56% of one Terminal seat cost (capability provision); replace Bloomberg PORT's construction function, keep risk reporting (PORT replacement); or end in-house data-feed-funded quant development (development termination).

THE POSITION

- Singapore now: 2,000+ single family offices (MAS, 2024), 500+ wealth managers, MAS regulatory clarity. Distribution-ready today.
- Southeast Asia at 12–24 months. UK and established markets to follow. No structural platform change required.

The case is made.

The conversation is open.
